We kick off the 2016/17 season with Brooklyn-based Alsarah & The Nubatones. Alsarah is a Sudanese-born singer, songwriter, and self-proclaimed practitioner of East African retro-pop, whose music is deeply rooted in Nubian 'Songs of Return' from the 1960s and 70s, and contemplates modern migration patterns and cultural exchanges between Sudan and Egypt. We welcome Alsarah & The Nubatones for their first ever Philadelphia appearance, performing music from their internationally renowned debut album, Silt, as well as from their 2016 album release, Manara.

Intercultural Journeys promotes peace through world-class music and arts performances, and dialogue-oriented platforms that encourage greater understanding among people of diverse cultures and faiths. In addition to performances, throughout each season we offer a variety of free events such as workshops, panel discussions, arts residencies, pre/post concert talk backs, and other forums designed to expand social consciousness and cultural awareness. This season we rediscover homeland as a temporal landscape shaped by legacies of migration, cultural encounters, and artistic exchanges.
